ULTIMATE LOLLA GALLERY

Are you going to Lollapalooza this weekend? We are too, and while we'll be taking photos, honestly we'd much rather see yours.

That's why we're asking for your help in creating the ultimate Lolla concert gallery—one photo of every band at the fest. Contribute and you may see your photo at redeyechicago.com next week.

Here are three ways you can contribute:

» Tweet the photo to @redeyechicago with the hashtag #lolla20 and remember to include the name of the band.

» Email the photo to redyetalk@gmail.com with #lolla20 in the subject line and the name of the band.

» Or, feel free to post it on our Facebook page at facebook.com/theredeye.

That's it. You rock.

That's the estimated height (in feet) of a tower to be built in Saudi Arabia—and a Chicago firm drew the plans for the cloud-piercing building

A tower designed by Chicago architects Adrian Smith and Gordon Gill and to be built in Saudi Arabia will be the world's tallest building if completed, according to plans unveiled Tuesday. Here are the deets. TRIBUNE

Name: Kingdom Tower

Location: Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, a city on the Red Sea

Height: About 3,280 feet—at least 568 feet taller than the world's current tallest building, Dubai's Burj Khalifa. (The building's exact height has not been revealed.)

Background: Construction of Kingdom Tower will start "imminently" and is expected to last about five years, according to Adrian Smith + Gordon Gill Architecture. The building will house a luxury hotel, apartments, condos, office space and the world's highest observatory (left).

Construction costs: About $1.2 billion. The tower is part of Kingdom City, a $20 billion development project.

How does the Willis Tower compare? The skyscraper would be at least 1,500 feet taller than the Willis Tower.

My real friends are obsolete

Earlier this year, I broke my best friend. And last month I bought another best friend. At least that's what it seems like.

When my laptop tumbled off my bed and the screen shattered, I was devastated. This was more than just a piece of expensive (and apparently fragile) hardware. This was my primary means of communicating with people.

Fortunately, I got my new laptop just in time for the arrival of the newest social networking star.

When Google+ launched with the intent of making Facebook as obsolete as Myspace, I received an invite the first day it was released (yeah, I'm totes cool). The best feature of Google+ is the ability to put people into different circles ranging from "friend" to "following," which is the politically correct way to say, "I have no idea who you are but you have a hot profile pic." Life is slowly becoming "The Sims," in which every interaction is immediately judged and the relationship is given a numbered ranking.

But the addition of yet another social networking site has made me come to a realization: I hate all this social networking. It's left me feeling more unsocial than ever. In my life, none of my favorite moments has been a status update, an online chat or a text (although I've never had an athlete retweet me after I begged him to, so that might change).

It's to the point where I have my most meaningful interactions with people I've never met and know how they look only at 73-by-73 pixels. The scary thing is, I follow their updates like I actually know them, while people like my good friend Luke, whom I've known almost my whole life, could be anywhere in the world right now because he doesn't tweet or plupdate (that's updating Google+; it'll catch on, just wait).

The ease with which we now can stay in touch defeats the purpose of actually staying in touch. There was a reason friends were important, because it took effort to gain and maintain friendships. The fact that Luke probably is chopping wood in Montana right now is notable, but since I'm not bombarded with updates about it, I lose track of him while I know exactly the minute when people I don't know are going to the gym. And I somehow feel closer to them (granted, I LOVE workout updates).

Some people see Google+ as a way to start over as their Facebook profiles become overwhelmed with too many friends. I'm already thinking about starting Life+ for everyone's unmanageable Google+, in which people who interact with me are put into one of my friend circles based on how much I enjoy their company. You can get a coveted invite to Life+ only by being invited to do something with me—in person. This is a bit of a radical idea, so I'm capping it around 30 people.

If you're interested, tweet me for membership details.

NEW YORK Would you dump your date if he or she put on a few pounds?

Your answer likely depends on whether you're a man or a woman, according to a new poll jointly conducted by AskMen and cosmopolitan.com.

Nearly half of men questioned in the poll of 70,000 people said they would ditch a partner who gained weight, compared with only 20 percent of women.

Two-thirds of men also said they had fantasized about their partner's friends, while only one-third of women had done so.

"Even as men are getting more comfortable with meeting their girlfriends online and less anxious about who she's 'friending' there, other romantic behaviors have proven to be timeless ones: chivalry isn't dead, size matters, and women forgive while men forget," said James Bassil, editor-in-chief of AskMen.

While only 18 percent of women said they would want their mate to be better endowed, more than 51 percent of men said they wished they themselves were.

But the survey also found 39 percent of men chose family as their top choice of the ultimate status symbol. By contrast, 43 percent of women selected a beautiful home, compared with only 6.5 percent of men. One-quarter of women named a successful partner as a top status symbol.

But men were more likely to lie about their number of past sex partners (50 percent) than women (35 percent).

We asked RedEye's social media friends to, ahem, weigh in on the weight and dating debate. Here are some of the responses. Follow us on Twitter at @redeyechicago and on Facebook at facebook.com/theredeye.

74 percent

“Chivalry isn’t dead, size matters, and women forgive while men forget.”

James Bassil, editor-in-chief of AskMen

One thing both sexes agreed on was an as-yet undeveloped male birth control pill, an idea that proved popular all around. More than half of women would want their partner to take it, while more than two-thirds of men were ready for male birth control.

But the sexes differed about paying for dates, at least in the early stages.

More women, 38 percent, think each should pay their own way, versus 33 percent who think men should foot the bill. But 59 percent of men think they should cover the tab, at least until a relationship is established.

Nearly 80 percent of men said they feel cheated by the divorce courts. But more women feel the sexes receive equal treatment than those who agree the men get a raw deal.

Women also are far less comfortable with their mates keeping in touch with their ex. More than two-thirds of men are OK with their partner friending an ex on Facebook, as opposed to 38 percent of women.

But three-quarters of men surveyed said they consider sexting cheating.

WEAK!! Real men will stay with a woman through “thick” or “thin” LITERALLY.

few women would dump a guy for that

@Miss_Shine87

My mate would have to work out b4 I ditched them. But if they said no, then I'd have to go. Health is very important to me.

if a man leaves you bc you gained weight, then you know he's shallow and not worth having a relationship with.

Police board member Ghian Foreman becomes emotional last month while talking about the recent homicides in Kenwood and Hyde Park. CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

South Side outrage

Obama's neighborhood alarmed by a recent spate of homicides

Chicago Tribune

Residents are up in arms about a spurt of violence in Kenwood and Hyde Park, not far from where Secret Service agents keep President Obama's stately residence tightly guarded with concrete barriers.

Nearly 150 people packed a recent Chicago Police Board meeting to hear a response to the violence, which includes four murders in a little more than three months—all within about a mile of the president's home on a block of million-dollar brick mansions.

"I'm not going to let my daughters grow up and become immune to the sound of gunshots," Ghian Foreman, himself a Kenwood resident and a member of the police board, said at the meeting as his voice cracked with emotion and he fought back tears.

The Chicago Police Department's No. 2 official blamed the recent violence on warring between two "wannabe" gangs.

In the most recent murder, Tony McCoy, the "Never before have we seen the tragedies that have occurred over the last few months. The rare sound of gunfire has become commonplace."

—Hyde Park resident Ogi Eggleston during a Chicago Police Board meeting son of a popular Chicago Park District mentor who organized violence prevention activities in addition to basketball tournaments, was gunned down in broad daylight less than three weeks ago.

Although police believe the recent violence was gang-related, McCoy's parents are adamant their son was not a gang member.

Usually few spectators attend meetings of the police board, whose responsibilities deal mostly with the discipline of officers. But dozens of residents from Kenwood and surrounding Hyde Park and Bronzeville saw it as a chance to talk to police brass about the violence, crowding into the meeting room at police headquarters last month.

Over the course of two hours, residents shouted questions at officials about the violence.

"Never before have we seen the tragedies that have occurred over the last few months," Ogi Eggleston, a lifelong resident of Hyde Park, said as he read from a letter before receiving a standing ovation from the crowd. "The rare sound of gunfire has become commonplace."

Until the recent spike in violence, the last murder in Kenwood had been in December 2009, when a 79-year-old man was killed in a parking lot.

A combined three murders took place in Kenwood and Hyde Park in both 2008 and 2009 and none occurred in 2010, according to a Tribune review of police statistics.

Heat index in triple digits

The heat index edged into triple digits throughout the Chicago area Tuesday afternoon, with 93-degree heat at O'Hare, Midway and the lakefront feeling like 103 degrees or even hotter by midafternoon.

Lakeview bank robbery

A Bank of America branch on Chicago's North Side was robbed Tuesday, officials said. About 9 a.m., a man walked into the branch at 3215 N. Lincoln Ave. in Lakeview and went up to a teller to announce the robbery.

A knife-wielding man walked into a Gage Park Walgreens early Tuesday morning and stabbed three people before he was arrested by police, authorities said. The incident happened in the 5500 block of South Kedzie Avenue.

Debt ceiling deal is finalized, but few are satisfied with outcome

President Obama discusses the debt ceiling deal Tuesday at the White House.
GETTY IMAGES

5 WASHINGTON With the deadline for raising the nation's debt ceiling only hours away, President Obama signed a historic deficit-reduction package into law Tuesday that aims to cut trillions of dollars from federal spending while increasing the debt limit immediately.

Obama acted just hours after the Senate passed the bill on a bipartisan 74-26 vote.

The president called the weeks-long standoff over raising the debt ceiling "a manufactured crisis" that didn't help a faltering economy.

"It's pretty likely that the uncertainty surrounding the raising of the debt ceiling for both businesses and consumers has been unsettling and just one more impediment to the full recovery that we need," he said. "And it was something that we could have avoided entirely."

He also made it clear that he'll continue to press for tax increases in the months ahead to help balance the federal budget.

"Since you can't close the deficit with just spending cuts, we'll need a balanced approach where everything's on the table," he said. "Everyone's going to have to chip in. That's only fair. That's the principle I'll be fighting for during the next phase of this process."

'Spoiled children'

How angry is this country? A majority of Americans disapprove of the deal struck by President Obama and Congress, and three out of four believe elected officials have acted like "spoiled children." Here are the results of Monday's CNN/ORC International poll.

52%

say they are opposed to the debt ceiling deal

77%

say elected officials have acted like spoiled children

14%

Congress' approval rating, an all-time low

44%

say they are in favor of the debt ceiling deal

17%

say elected officials acted like responsible adults

45%

President Obama's approval rating

THE END DAYS

The Bears have given their tight end position a completely new look. Here's how they did it.

JULY 28

Signed free agent Matt Spaeth (above), who played last season for Pittsburgh.

JULY 28

After signing Spaeth, the Bears told Brandon Manumaleuna he would be released. He had just signed a five-year deal in 2010 and received $6 million up front.

JULY 28

Last season's starting tight end, Greg Olsen is traded to Carolina for a third-round draft pick. Olsen caught 41 passes for 404 yards and five touchdowns in 2010.

JULY 29

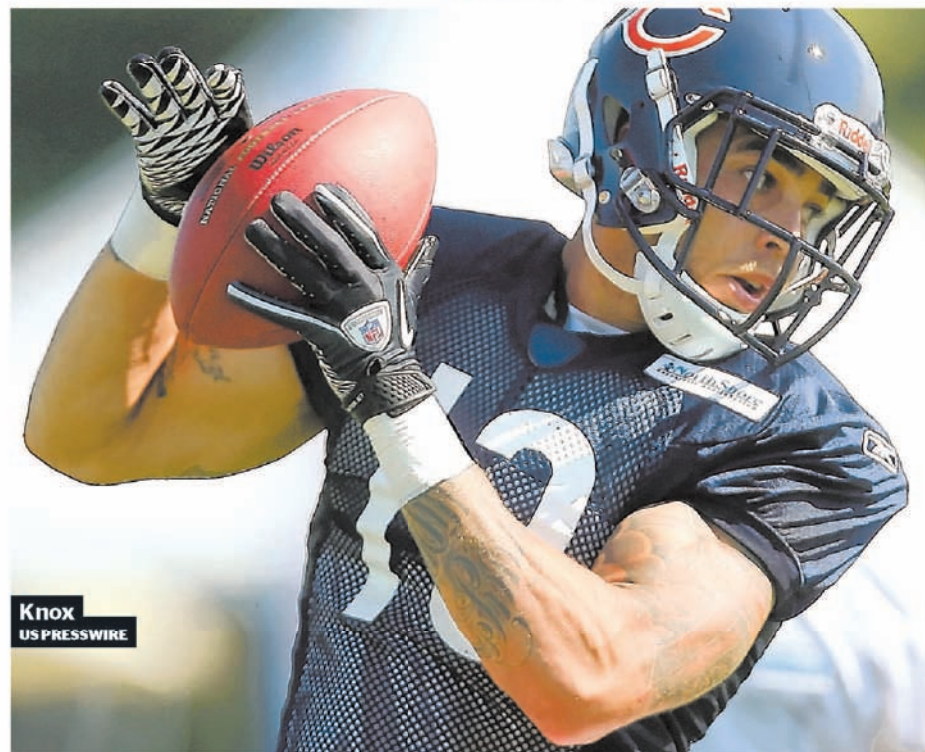

Signed undrafted free-agent Draylen Ross out of North Texas.

TUESDAY

Desmond Clark (above) agreed to a deal to return to the team. REDEYE

BULK

Bears wide receivers beef up in the offseason

Chicago Tribune

It's hard not to notice Johnny Knox's biceps bulging through his arm tattoos. He is far from the skinny little receiver who led the Bears in receiving yards last season with 960 on 51 catches.

No, Knox hasn't reached Terrell Owens status in terms of his physique, but he obviously did some heavy lifting during the off-season.

"I just had to get stronger up top," said the 6-foot, 189-pound Knox, who said he put on 10 pounds. "That was my goal during the lockout. When I curl, I curl light for repetition. When it comes to bench or incline, that's when I do heavy stuff."

Knox's legs still look a little thin, but he promised they're also stronger.

"I did a lot of lower body, too, but my legs are little," he kidded. "They're not going to get much bigger than this."

Knox wasn't the only one who bulked up.

Fellow receivers Earl Bennett and Devin Hester added some muscle.

"We kind of started taking the right supplements," said Hester, who put on 6 pounds. "Protein after workouts really helped out a lot. When you start building your body up with protein, that's when the muscles come."

Knox and Hester, like a handful of their teammates, spent a portion of the off-season at EFT Sports Performance in Highland Park. Owner Elias Karras put the players through a rigorous training regimen that included a climb up "The Hill" off the expressway near Lake Cook Road. The duo joined Matt Toeaina, Rod Wilson, Chester Taylor, rookie Robert Hughes and ex-Bear Tommie Harris in making the climb twice a week.

"We'd run up, walk down backward, come down and go through five, six drills, take a minute break, then run up again," Knox said. "We would do it like five times."

MOST DISLIKED GM: ANGELO, HENDRY OR WILLIAMS?

south

SOXMAN

In Chicago, Jim Hendry, Kenny Williams and Jerry Angelo might be more closely associated with the Three Stooges than Moe, Larry and Curly. Over the years, Cubs, White Sox and Bears fans have been hit with frying pans, hammers and cream pies in the form of poor drafts, worse signings and underachieving teams.

Although Hendry couldn't win a Milton Bradley board game if his job depended on it and the thought of being stuck with the 2011 versions of Adam Dunn and Alex Rios for years sends me into convulsions, it could be worse.

Angelo passed on drafting Troy Polamalu, Nnamdi Asomugha, Anquan Boldin, Maurice Jones-Drew and Tony Romo for the likes of Michael Haynes, Rex Grossman, Tommie Harris and Cedric Benson.

Maybe I'm feeling sentimental after seeing Journey in concert Saturday, but at least Kenny Williams helped bring Chicago a championship.

You give Jim Hendry too much credit, my friend.

Sure, Angelo has made enough mistakes to melt down and re-forge the Lombardi Trophy, but the Bears reached the NFC title game last season. Hendry, on the other hand, has managed to dismantle the Cubs organization at every level.

They have the smallest front office in baseball. Where other major-league clubs have improved their teams by embracing advanced statistics, Hendry proudly declares how little stock he puts in statistical analysis.

He ran one of the most beloved Cubs of all time, Ryne Sandberg, out of town and instead hired a manager who throws the team's rising star under the bus every other day. Worst of all, Hendry has spent the past week gleefully celebrating to the media the Cubs will have the same nucleus, currently 21 games under .500, back next season.

There's bad, there's worse, and then there's Hendry.

1 What did Bears players think after their first padded practice of camp Monday?

"Man, I feel like a woman."

"Man, that new Maroon 5 song is butt-rageous, right guys?"

How should I know? I don't play for the Bears.

"No matter how much heat we're feeling, Jerry Angelo is feeling more."

"We're screwed. You suck, Jerry."

2 What drill would you make players run in Bears training camp?

Here's one for the fans: The Gimlet. We're so screwed.

The "for the love of God, do the best you can this year" drill, of course.

"Green Light, Red Light."

The game show drill: "Whose Offensive Line Is It Anyway?"

CPR if they plan on keeping Jay Cutler alive.

3 Who's the hardest player to watch in Chicago baseball?

Kerry Wood. Ha ha, hard.

Desmond Clark. Ever seen him try to catch passes? They need to call dude a fright end.

Starlin Castro. I weep for his future.

I'm Dunn talking bad about the Sox. It's bad for Morel.

Alex Rios. He's officially gone from suck to blow.

4 Tiger Woods returns to golf this week. What did he miss?

The swing of things.

They still show golf on TV? Are you sure you weren't watching "Caddyshack"?

Nothing major (ha—see what I did there?).

Aces, birdies and eagles. Just look at his world ranking!

Dunno. Who watches golf when Tiger's not playing?

5 Lingerie basketball exists. What other sport should get the lingerie treatment?

Skeleton. They need more support.

Lingerie hot-dog eating contests, lingerie debate (I love smart women), lingerie line dancing ...

Men's soccer. Bring on the boxer briefs.

Golf—wait a minute, Tiger Woods has already been there, done that.

Cheerleading ... oh wait, you said sport. In that case, gimme golf.

Tiger back—again

He's dropped all the way to 28th in the world, but Woods 'excited' for return

The balky left knee and Achilles tendon are "good to go"—good enough that he almost teed it up last week. The swing, though, hasn't been tested in a competitive arena in 12 weeks.

He has fallen to 28th in the world rankings, lowest since the start of his first full season as a professional. His caddie is a temp, albeit someone who has known him as long as anyone outside his family.

Amid the uncertainty that accompanies his return at the WGC-Bridgestone Invitational, Tiger Woods is most certain about his approach.

"I'm excited," he said Tuesday. "Excited to compete, to play—and hopefully win the golf tournament."

Even after one of the longest layoffs of his career, that last part still hasn't wavered.

"That's one of the reasons why I took as long as I did to come

WGC-Bridgestone Invitational

1 p.m. Thursday, Golf Channel
Woods tees off at 12:40 p.m.

back," Woods said after nine holes of practice. "I wanted to get to this point where I can go ahead and start playing golf again like this. It's been a very long time."

Woods hadn't been seen with a golf club in his hand since The Players Championship, where he withdrew after nine holes.

He subsequently pulled out of four more tournaments, including the U.S. Open and British Open, to let the injuries fully rest and go through rehabilitation.

Woods disclosed he'd been putting and chipping for several weeks, but could cut loose on a driver only "two to three weeks ago."

Things have gone so well, he added, that he considered entering last week's Greenbrier Classic before deciding to take one extra week of caution.

Asked how long it has been since he felt as good physically as he does now, Woods responded: "Years."

Woods also confirmed that longtime friend Bryon Bell will serve as his caddie both this week and at next week's PGA Championship. Woods fired Steve Williams during the layoff, ending a 12-year working relationship.

Kyle Orton (left) might be one of the most underappreciated quarterbacks in the NFL. But not in Miami. Dolphins fans cheered for the former Bears quarterback Monday night during a scrimmage.

There's one small problem though: Orton plays for Denver. How bad do you have to be when your own team's fans turn on you? Only Miami QB Chad Henne knows.

WE'VE LOST THE KEYS

I really hate to break the news to Bulls fans, but this NBA lockout is gonna be a long one. I'm talking see-you-in-fall-2012 long. I hope I'm wrong, but let's be honest, I rarely am.

IN LIVING COLOR

Northwestern is redesigning its basketball court for the 2011-12 season, and one of the options is a purple court. I gotta admit, I'm over the odd-colored playing surfaces. Even if I am color-detecting-challenged like all dogs, I can see this trend has jumped the shark.

TREATED

Tiger, I wish I could quit you. But, truth is, especially this time of year, watching you golf again will be nice. One request, though, can you not suck?

IN THE DOGHOUSE

Danica (above), I don't care where you're driving next season. You are popular because of your image, not your talent. You've won once in how many years of racing? I rest my case. But, you can still rub my belly. GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Cheers to unusual beers

New spots boast brews from way off the beaten path

By Sarah Freeman

A beer menu with plenty of craft options is pretty much a prerequisite in Chicago. But some of the city's newest restaurants are focusing their beer lists to pair with Belgian food, healthy Indian, spicy Vietnamese and more. That means you're likely to encounter beers you've never tasted—such as a Dutch ale brewed in a monastery or a Laotian lager with a hint of jasmine. Check out some of the most unusual finds at these new spots.

SARAH FREEMAN IS A METROMIX SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR. METROMIX@TRIBUNE.COM | @METROMIXCHI

LA TRAPPE ISID'OR

Telegraph

2601 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-292-9463

It was quite a challenge to supply the Logan Square wine bar's eight lone taps with European brews, beer buyer Jason Baldacci said. "It's like writing a short story instead of a novel. In writing a novel you can wander a little bit, but in a short story every word counts," said Baldacci, who also manages The Bluebird's extensive beer selection.

Why you need this beer: Baldacci says La Trappe Isid'or ($7) is one of his top-five favorite beers. This amber beer, brewed by Dutch Trappist monks to mark their 125th anniversary, features orange flavors and a dry, earthy, spicy hops profile.

BEERLAO LAGER

Saigon Sisters

567 W. Lake St. 312-496-0900

When Vietnamese dishes set your mouth on fire, a cold beer is necessary to extinguish the flames. "As we change our menu we are going to make sure we have new, interesting beers that are hot out there and hard to find," said Mary Aregoni, owner of the new spot in the West Loop, as well as the Saigon Sisters in the French Market. "It's a small selection but it's very carefully done."

Why you need this beer: Beerlao ($6.50), made with white jasmine rice, is the national beer of Laos.

TAJ MAHAL PREMIUM LAGER

Bombay Spice

111 W. Illinois Ave. 312-477-7657

Simplicity defines Bombay Spice, a River North restaurant that focuses on healthful Indian dishes. Its beer philosophy is simple, too: "We offer traditional imported Indian beer that people in India like to drink," manager Tyler Mendoza said.

Why you need this beer: Taj Mahal ($12 for a 22-ounce bottle), named for the landmark palace, has citrus flavors that work well with tangy Indian dishes.

ROOTS HOUSE BREW

Roots Handmade Pizza

1924 W. Chicago Ave. 773-645-4949

"Nothing goes better with pizza than beer and ... we wanted a great beer list that complements our Midwestern roots and our pizzas," co-owner Greg Mohr said. Roots' beer menu is made up of more than 70

Midwestern beers.

Why you need this beer: Roots' special French-style country ale ($6) is made by Two Brothers Brewing, of suburban Warrenville.

Lambrucha at Leopold

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

VANBERG & DEWULF'S LAMBROUCHA

Leopold

1450 W. Chicago Ave. 312-348-1028

The food and beer menus at this West Town restaurant are inspired by Belgium, but they're not afraid to break out of the borders. "We look for quality beers from both sides of the pond. A lot of people just throw anything that has a Belgian name on it and claim to have a Belgian list," bar manager Chris Rulmann said. "We try to explore this in as much detail as possible."

Why you need this beer: If you like Belgian lambics, this one's infused with fermented kombucha tea ($21 for a 750-milliliter bottle).

FOOD LUST

Good stuff we ate

Maybe it's their diminutive size, lack of meat or my dad's messy experiments deep-frying them when I was a kid, but I've never really been a huge fan of frog legs. But after trying the delicate and delicious roasted frog legs ($11) dressed up with dill creme fraiche and spiced with smoked cinnamon and pimento at new Logan Square wine bar Telegraph (2601 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-292-9463), I'm a total convert.

FOOD FIGHT

SETTLING DELICIOUS, AGE-OLD DISAGREEMENTS ONE ARGUMENT AT A TIME

Some like their pizza cut in squares, while others swear by slices. For as long as we've been stuffing our faces with delicious food, there have been conflicts about the way we eat it. Addressing such fervent foodie issues, we bring you Food Fight.

This week: Which is the superior summer side dish: coleslaw or potato salad?

BOB FILA/TRIBUNE

COLESLAW

You're at a barbecue. You've got some sort of delicious grilled thing on your plate, a beer in your hand and you're headed for the sides. Seven-layer dip? Too much effort. Macaroni salad? More like "Make me so full I want to throw up on that random co-worker I invited" salad. No, the answer is coleslaw. It's light, it's delicious and SPOILER ALERT: It can take a hot dog to the next level. Try it. —ERNEST WILKINS

VS

POTATO SALAD

First off: Have you ever had a coleslaw craving? I didn't think so. Cabbage doesn't exactly incite riots. But potato salad is both mushy-wonderful and controversial. Pick your potato salad camp—mayo, mustard, red potatoes, etc.—and you're sure to find someone who's on the other side. But no need to argue. There's plenty of potato salad for everyone. —DANA MORAN

'Who cares about blowing up?'

Bucktown hip-hop duo The Cool Kids are just happy to be on the shelves

Retro-leaning hip-hop duo the Cool Kids embrace the warm weather on their long-awaited full-length debut, "When Fish Ride Bicycles" (Green Label Sound, an imprint of Mountain Dew). Songs like "Get Right" and "Summer Jam" sound custom-designed to blare from the speakers of some vintage boombox during a laid-back summer barbecue—or, perhaps more appropriately, from the stage at Lollapalooza, where the pair are scheduled to perform Sunday.

Of course, the story behind the album's creation isn't quite so sunny. Legal entanglements with a former label delayed the record's release so long that even Rolling Stone noted that the Cool Kids, whose hype arguably peaked in 2008, "aren't quite as buzzy as they once were" in a review of the new album. In a recent interview, the two Bucktown roommates—Antoine "Mikey Rocks" Reed, 23, and Evan "Chuck English" Ingersoll, 26—discussed the notion of hype, how they'd choose to spend a summer day in Chicago and the unlikely role a soda purveyor played in saving the group.

Was there a sense of relief when the album finally came out?

Antoine Reed: Definitely, man. It's been something we had in the works for a minute, and it was good to just be able to get that out the way and get ready for this next one.

The album obviously has a strong summer theme. What would your ideal summer day in Chicago consist of?

Evan Ingersoll: I'd say I'd have to get up and get something to eat. In the summertime, Big Star can start your day pretty well. Usually I go to Big Star, ride my bike, then go to the studio and make some music.

Did you do anything to celebrate the release?

EI: We went to the rooftop [at Reggie's Rock Club] and threw a barbecue and played the record and everybody came down and hung out. It was hard to believe that day really happened. For a while it seemed like it wasn't going to.

A lot of the reviews have focused on this idea that you guys somehow missed the window to really capitalize on the buzz you were getting. Did you ever share those concerns?

AR: Not really, man.

EI: Who cares about blowing up? We're trying to be dope. But public perception is interesting. If we come out and we fly for the next three records, our first buzz won't even count. It'll just be back story. People expect anyone in rap to have a meteoric rise and blow up real quick and be over fast. That's not what we're doing here. We're trying to last. We're not even trying to last; we are going to last.

With all the label drama, did you ever consider going the Prince route and changing your name to a symbol to get

Bear Hair

The Island of Misfit Toys

"Bear Hair"
(Tandem Shop)

It's taken me awhile to get around to the local, eight-piece pop-rockers' debut (which dropped in June), but I'm glad I finally did. Sure, "Bear Hair" wears many hats—overlong, indie rock opener "Beginnings of a Beard" certainly doesn't forecast the Why?-influenced hip-hop of "Work" or "Bear Hair 2"—and recalls musical predecessors such as The Format ("Taffy Apple Lifestyle People") and Okkervil River ("Knife-Throwing Academy") a little strongly. Yet the infectious songwriting (the toe-tapping jangle of "Insulated Crate"; the frisky, theatrical "Hermit Crab") and frontman Anthony Sanders' words redeem the album's choppiness. "I'm told be yourself; just don't weird out anyone else," he sings on "Mature," and in one line speaks to everyone who's stumbled along the transition from youth to adulthood.

In concert: 8 p.m. Tuesday at Schubas the album out?

EI: It never got that dire. All new artists go through the same thing with the label. You want to protect your art and you want to protect what you do, so some things become a little tougher. That's all that happened.

Have you been surprised by the number of people who have brought up the Mountain Dew logo on the cover as a negative?

AR: It's a storefront in the picture. That's what would be there. Am I supposed to wait for a label to come along and be cooler 'cause I have a record label logo on it? Someone is gonna put their logo on the [thing] anyway. We just live in a world where people see things and instead of just taking it for what it is they want to be like, "What's that?" There's no reason to think that deep into it. They're a dope brand and they gave us our way out. They saved our group. It's way bigger than what everybody else can imagine.

Are you guys as mellow in real life as you sound on the record?

EI: That's how it happens, man. We couldn't rap like that if we wasn't.

What's the last thing that got you heated?

AR: I handle everything pretty responsibly, man, as far as dealing with people and [stuff] that happens in everyday life.

EI: You gotta see life as they're going to be obstacles and things in your way, and the traffic is gonna go slow when you need to get there, but that's no one's fault. You gotta accept what's happening and leave it for what it is. I take life as it comes instead of letting it stress me out.

Comedian Sebastian Maniscalco on fashion disasters and hanging with Vince Vaughn

By Julia Borcherts

Chicago native Sebastian Maniscalco has made a name for himself as a touring comedian—from Vince Vaughn’s “Wild West Comedy Show” tour and resulting documentary film to a six-country USO tour in Asia to a stop last week at Montreal’s Just for Laughs Festival. But chances are you’re already somewhat familiar with his mug, having seen him on Comedy Central and Showtime specials or dispensing unsolicited fashion advice as a style correspondent on “The Tonight Show With Jay Leno.”

Fashion advice? We couldn’t resist. So we called him for tips and to hear highlights from his adventures—and his stand-up show this week at Zanies.

What was your favorite thing about the “Wild West Comedy Tour”?

Hanging out with Vince Vaughn was everything I thought it was going to be as far as traveling on the road with a movie star—going to restaurants through the kitchen and getting these private tables. For 30 days, you felt like a rock star. And then, soon after the tour, me and my friend Bret [Ernst], who was also on the tour, went out to a nightclub and we were literally at the back of the line, just like we were 31 days ago. [Laughs.] Funny how things changed real quick.

How has Chicago influenced your comedy style?

I grew up in an Italian family, and we always prided ourselves on being very polite, well-mannered kids. But my patience was tested when I left Chicago—I had a problem with the way people were behaving. It’s not just the West Coast; it’s more of the whole country I had a problem with. [Laughs.] That’s where my angst comes from in my act.

As a style correspondent, you seem to also get angsty over people’s grooming choices.

We talked about this a lot in my family—appropriate dress for the appropriate occasion. And as I catapulted into adulthood, I found that a lot of people apparently didn’t get the book on how to dress when they go out in public. [Laughs.] With Jay Leno, we hit a church where we saw a guy with camouflage pants come out, people with jerseys. And if you ever go on an airplane, you see people literally rolling right out of bed and into their seat. It just amazes me how society seems to be falling apart and how it’s starting with their wardrobe. [Laughs.]

What’s this summer’s most common fashion mistake?

A lot of guys wearing sandals. If you’re going to wear sandals, please have the appropriate toenails for the sandal. These nails look like wine corks. Just because it’s hot doesn’t give you the privilege to showcase your feet if they look like they’ve just been shredded through a wood chipper.

What are your favorite places in Chicago to people-watch?

Anywhere, really, that a lot of people congregate. I don’t like going there anymore, but the Taste of Chicago—that’s an abundance of material.

I like Chicago, though. I like coming back and grabbing a Portillo’s hot dog and going to Gibson’s for a steak. And the people are great. I’ve been all over the world, and I’m not trying to be nice, but it is one of the best cities in the world.

What can audiences expect at Zanies?

Material they can relate to—I have a lot of Chicago-based humor. The last show I did in Chicago was in April of 2010, so in between then and now, I filmed a one-hour comedy special that’s airing on Showtime later on this year. So expect a lot of new stuff—and a lot of angst. [Laughs.]

Party like a president

Who's on the guest list for Obama's birthday bash?

By Ariel Alexovich

REDEYE

If there's anybody who needs a stiff drink this week, it's probably President Obama, who's facing a cataclysmic national issue (the economy) and a personal one (turning 50). Luckily, Obama seems to have good friends who have gone to great lengths to throw him a star-studded birthday bash Wednesday at the Aragon Ballroom. (Despite the drama in Washington, Obama still is expected to attend.) Well, OK, it's a fundraiser, but Obama still gets to ring in his big 5-0 with Jennifer Hudson, who is scheduled to perform. Plus, we suspect a few other Chicago VIPs may be added to the guest list. Here's who our money is on. Don't worry, Mr. President, Blago is nowhere near this list.

ARIEL@TRIBUNE.COM | @MISSARIEL

ON THE BILL

Jennifer Hudson

O-connection: Hudson—Chicago's version of "Jenny from the block"—was picked by Obama to sing the national anthem at the 2008 Democratic National Convention. She also performed at Obama's first state dinner in '09.

OK Go

O-connection: The band, which has Chicago roots, put out a YouTube video in '08 imploring its fans to vote for Obama. And so the meme "OKGOBAMA" was born.

Herbie Hancock

O-connection: The jazz singer rocked a January state dinner at the White House just about as much as you possibly can rock a slightly stodgy party in honor of the Chinese president.

PARTY DETAILS

When: Wednesday (his birthday is Thursday)

Where: Aragon Ballroom

Also: A dinner fundraiser is planned for some special donors to go with the show at a cost of $35,800 a person. That had better be one delicious meal.

Follow along: RedEye is keeping track of President Obama's birthday party at the Aragon Ballroom on Twitter with hashtag #Obama50. Details at <http://trib.in/oAIODE>.

SURPRISE GUESTS?

Wilco

O-connection: Jeff Tweedy headlined a fundraiser for Rahm Emanuel's mayoral campaign. But Obama's the prez, so he may get the whole band.

Derrick Rose

O-connection: D-Rose hung out with the president around this time last year, as he and a few other NBA stars entertained injured soldiers in Washington. Obama might want Rose at the Aragon to share a few choice words about the NBA lockout.

Oprah Winfrey

O-connection: Sure, supposedly she's hustling to improve her self-titled TV network, but of all known Obama fans, Oprah can afford a private jet to sing "Happy Birthday" to the president.

WAKE UP!

- Are you walking around like the living dead after wrestling with your CPAP all night?
- Do you fall asleep in your lunch at your desk?
- Does your CPAP feel as if you are being smothered by an octopus?

Put the hoses, mask and straps away and get into Oral Appliance Therapy to treat your Sleep Apnea and snoring! Midwest Dental Sleep Center is your solution to sound, healthy, sleep. With the oral appliance you will no longer be restricted by the hose from your machine; free to sleep how and where you wish! Our patients are surprised by how comfortable the oral appliance is to wear. Patients love how simple it is to maintain and appreciate its discreetness. Another feature patients like is its portability. Ever brought a CPAP to the airport?!

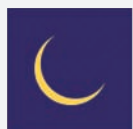

Oral appliance therapy is completely noninvasive and is covered by medical insurance. The oral appliance is a small clear plastic retainer custom fit to the upper and lower teeth. It gently brings the lower jaw forward, opening the airway, allowing you to breathe and sleep soundly! As easy to wear as a sports mouth guard, you can talk, drink water, open and close your mouth and sleep in the position you prefer. Not to mention it makes airport security lines a breeze! You can even bring your appliance camping – no outlet required.

Is oral appliance therapy right for you? If you suffer from mild to moderate sleep apnea or are severe and are not wearing your CPAP as directed, then an oral appliance may be the alternative treatment you've been seeking. Wake up to a new treatment and a new you – the well rested, refreshed, less anxious you! Just imagine, the power of sleep in the palm of your hand.

Our Doctors understand the seriousness of oral appliance therapy and are able to ensure you get the right appliance for your needs and that you're able to properly utilize the oral appliance. We have successfully treated thousands of patients, and our staff's knowledge and experience really shows. We have teams focused on getting your therapy covered in network through insurance, and to take each of your calls with care. Your oral appliance program takes place in our quiet, relaxed office where your comfort is paramount. Our modern atmosphere is far from the feel of traditional dental facilities. We're your friendly dental sleep solution!

With three locations, Midwest Dental Sleep Centers are Illinois' only stand alone practices dedicated to treating patients with snoring and sleep apnea. Our Dentists are trained by General Dentist Dr. Richard Craig, D.D.S. a diplomat of the American Board of Dental Sleep Medicine and founder of Midwest Dental Sleep Center.

Who's the mama?

Someone on "The Office" is pregnant and—spoiler alert!—it's not Creed. "Yes, someone else is pregnant, and it's not me," Creed Bratton said this week at an NBC party, ew.com reports. It's already been confirmed that Jenna Fischer's real-life pregnancy will be portrayed on the show next season, so who else is preggo?

Waiting for The Throne

You can still watch The Throne, but you'll be seeing them later than planned. On Tuesday, the superduo of Jay-Z and Kanye West (above) announced they would be pushing back their Watch The Throne tour, according to pitchfork.com. The duo now is scheduled to perform at the United Center on Dec. 1 instead of the originally scheduled two-night stay in October. Stay tuned.

Get 'Real'

Would you sign your life away for reality TV fame? Cast members on "The Real World" are—literally—according to a 30-page contract published by The Village Voice. The document reveals that MTV does not claim responsibility for cast members dying, losing limbs, suffering nervous breakdowns or contracting STDs, and implies that they may be humiliated and portrayed "in a false light." Sign us up!

Green

Raekwon's casting call

Cee Lo Green is going to be a father—on film. The "Forget You" singer will play Raekwon's pops in a movie the Wu-Tang Clan rapper is making based on his life growing up in Staten Island, xxlmag.com reports. The Shaolin Chef has high hopes for the project, telling the mag Green is "just one out of the greats that's gonna be on the project."

'I'M HAPPY'

Looking healthy and relaxed at his Miami Beach, Fla., home, Sean Kingston (above) said in a live interview with MTV on Tuesday that he is doing well after a Jet Ski accident in May that nearly killed him. "It was a tragic situation, but God put me through it and I'm excited," the "Beautiful Girls" singer said. "I'm happy." Kingston revealed his accident was so violent that he needed open-heart surgery, but now he's looking forward to recording a new album and performing again. Welcome back, Sean. 5

That's how many No. 1 songs Katy Perry has tallied off "Teenage Dream." The newly pink-haired singer's track "Last Friday Night (T.G.I.F.)" is set to hit the Billboard mark this week, making Perry the first artist to put out that many No. 1 songs from a single album in 19 years of Billboard's Pop Songs chart.
